Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Saturday 27 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Fine for most.

Today:
Many parts dry with plenty of sunshine after early fog patches clear. Feeling quite warm in light winds. Cloud and patchy rain affecting parts of Northern Ireland, western and southern Scotland.

Tonight:
Low cloud and patchy fog developing in places. Skies remaining mostly clear across southern and western parts where another frost is likely.

Sunday:
Fog and low cloud slowly clearing inland, though persisting near some coasts, especially in the east. Feeling warm in sunshine, but chilly along North Sea coasts.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Central and eastern areas seeing mist, low cloud, and some fog, clearing slowly each day. Elsewhere, mainly fine with sunny spells and night frost. A few showers likely developing Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.